Fans Mocked by Air-Conditioned Dorm Assignment

While the news of air-conditioned dorms made most members of the Minnesota delegation giddy with excitement, not all were in such high spirits. History Day staffers spotted this sad collection of fans while packing for the national contest. The fans first heard about the air-conditioned dorms from History Day’s Facebook post. “I can’t believe that they would publicly reject us like that on the Internet. They could have at least broken up with us in person.” “This isn’t the last you’ve seen of us,” the fans remarked. “You may have gotten lucky this year, but you can’t hide in your air-conditioned paradise forever. Next year, as always, you’ll come crawling back to us. You’ll see.”

Indiana COSTCO cashier spotted wearing "Mr. History is my Homeboy" button

But wait? How did he get that button...?

As Sarah and Rachel made their way through the exciting state of Indiana, they realized they had forgotten to pack the item that holds the staff together throughout the week: Cheeseballs. "By the time we realized this horrible mistake, the rest of the staff had gone to bed for the early Saturday flight already. It's tradition that the drivers snack on cheeseballs on the way to D.C., we had to stop right away." said Sarah. The girls quickly sought the nearest Costco from their wise phones and went 50 miles out of the way to secure the cheesy snack for the van. "We knew exactly where to go once we got there, it's like I have a cheesball radar." said Rachel. To their surprise, when they got to the register with two buckets of "more-Cheeseballs-than-you-would-need-to-last-2-lifetimes," the cashier smiled, and said "Not to worry, ladies, someone anticipated your arrival. The cheeseballs are paid for and waiting for your consumption. The guy didn't have much to say besides, 'thanks, you are now my homeboy.'"

Get to Know your Mentors

Megan Brownell just graduated this spring with a social studies education degree from Winona State University, where she helped organize the Southeast History Day event for three years. An avid biker, Megan completed a 250 mile ride across Minnesota. Her dream is to be the first Minnesota History Day staffer to travel to nationals by bike, while pulling a small trailer filled with performance props.

Emily Klipp just graduated from the University of Minnesota and has been a mentor in Minneapolis for four years. She's looking forward to dorm food, but certain things are off limits. "I'm a true tater-hater," she remarked. "Fried, mashed, hashed - just say "no" to potato." When she's not cheering you on at History Day, Emily is opening a clothing boutique in White Bear Lake. "HD bowling shirts will be accessorized like you've never seen them before! Do you want to follow me on Pinterest? Can you teach me how to say, 'Go Bears?'"

Another University of Minnesota mentor, Torrie White was a History Day participant at Anoka High School. Besides History Day, Torrie has a love for all things Hogwarts. Little did she know that Katie is also an expert on witchcraft and wizardry. "I've never lost a game of Harry Potter Trivial Pursuit. Katie can't possibly be dorkier than I am. I'll out-Potter her any time, any place." The HP Trivia showdown is coming to a dorm lounge near you...

Fun City Frontier:

Town Seeks Fun City Marshal!

Greetings, fellow Functionians! As the 3rd Annual FCAT Games draw near, the search begins for the 2013 Fun City Marshal. Duties as Marshal include, being my right hand man (or woman), acting as flag bearer during the opening ceremony, exhibiting ambassador like qualities and having an overall desire to have fun as well as help others have fun. You may be called to represent Fun City should a tie breaker game be necessary or encouraging other Functionians to help earn points for our thriving metropolis. If you think you have what it takes, come and find me, Mayor Hernandez, for a short, informal meet and greet. Marshals will be announced in tomorrow's Bulletin!

Awesome Town Aquarian

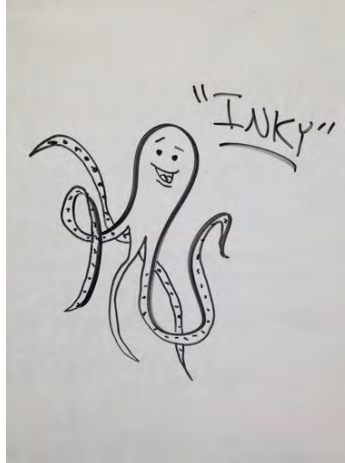

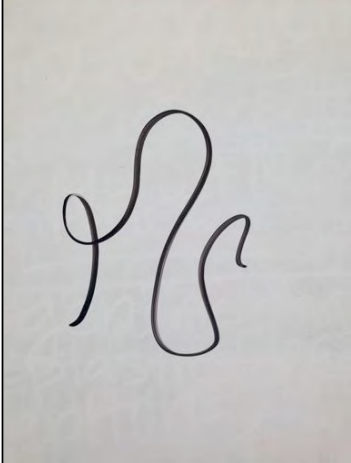

Do you like flags? Are you good at standing in place for a long time? Do you enjoy waving things? If so, you may have what it takes to represent your town in the upcoming FCAT Games as the Awesome Town Marshal! The list of responsibilities for the Marshal is as long as the honor associated with the title is long-lived. Marshals will be expected to act as the town's flag bearer, represent the city at all official FCAT events, and make sure to instill teamwork amongst other Awesometownians. Anyone who thinks they can handle the weight of the position should contact Mayor Parsons. Remember, the pay is small, the glory is great, and you will forever be remembered as the person who "put an 'A' on MN HD 2013." Marshals will be announced in tomorrow's Bulletin.

Squiggle Game

The Squiggle Game is a staff favorite on a Friday afternoon at 4:00. This silly exercise requires creativity and a steady hand. Each day in The Bulletin, a new “squiggle” will appear on the tear-off-and-submit page. To earn points for your city, use the provided squiggle to turn it into an animal or whatever else your clever little mind can think of and turn it in to CHDDB headquarters. Winners will be chosen and revealed in the next bulletin. Happy squigglings! (Sample squiggle comes from Mr. History, himself!)

CAMP HISTORY DAY DAILY BULLETIN

Scandal Rocks Day 1 of Nationals 2013

The scandal began early this year with some unprecedented challenges in the FCAT community. Grace Gardner was recruited to Awesome Town by Mayor Parsons, but little did he know he may have a spy on his hands... It started early on in the airport when Grace was seen tripping Mayor Parsons with her suitcase and almost caused a major collision. Nothing much was thought about this initially, it seemed like such a harmless accident. It wasn't until later that it was discovered Grace was an Awesome Town member and seen conspiring with her sister, Sovigne, a member of Fun City. The pieces then began falling into place. Grace has been spying for Fun City while pretending to be a willing member of Awesome Town--she even ran for marshal! Never in the history of FCAT has someone been suspected of spying for the other town. To make matters worse, Sovigne is also running for marshal of Fun City. Suddenly, the plan developed. Mayor Rachel was using the Gardner sisters to try and create Funsome City and completely overrule Kyle. "I've been framed!" claims Grace, but either she is that great of a spy or she is being set up by her twin sister. We will have to keep a close eye on these sisters as the week unfolds to make sure that this situation does not become any more dangerous. The future of FCAT may depend on the trustworthiness of its members.

History Day Student Seeks Permanent Residence at FDR Memorial, Cute Pooch to Blame

Today at the FDR memorial, one young history day scholar was seized with a new dream--she desired to leave History Day behind and become the permanent resident of this particular monument. "Maybe it was the sunlight glinting off the Great Depression statues or the gurgling laughter of the waterfalls, but I knew that this was my destiny. Eleanor is gone, Franklin is alone in this world." Anna said after being coaxed, cajoled and corralled

Back to the Minnesota bus. While Anna was enamored, her father thought she had become ensnared. "This isn't like my daughter. She's bright, talented, motivated--why would she want to give it up to take up residence alongside the bronzed statues of men and women in bread lines?" When questioned, Anna's father was visibly rattled, hat askew and pants bearing the marks of the pitched water fight that his daughter had waged. Back on the bus, Anna was seated alone, glowering at her captives and plotting a way to return to the enticing, inspiring beauty of the FDR memorial and the ideals the president espoused. Anna will remain under close supervision until it is deemed safe for her to experience the history of DC without becoming overly attached to the monuments and their striking symbolism.

Maggie Schmidt, History Day Project Guru?

Staffer Jill, a newbie to not only National History Day, but Washington D.C. in general, was lucky enough to sit between two National History Day veterans on the flight to D.C.-- Maggie Schmidt and Tom Hilgren. When the pair started describing past National History Day events to Jill, Maggie started listing all of Bailey Hilgren's (Tom's daughter) past projects. Mr. Hilgren sat astonished that Maggie was able to recall every project topic of Baileys, from The Exploratorium to John Muir to the Mennonite Conscientious Objectors, she rattled them off. Once the conversation ended and the three of them dozed off, bizarre dreams of past projects floated in their minds. It's safe to say that if you would like to know about any past National History Day projects, Maggie Schmidt, the History Day project guru, is the one to turn to.

FCAT Marshal applications still being accepted (Mooster History Wants You!)

After one day of friendly games between Fun City and Awesome Town a new competition has emerged. The race to be named Town or City Marshal is heating up. Mayor Hernandez claims she was bribed with a fresh batch of chocolate chip cookies. Hernandez was quoted saying, "It's DC Cupcakes or nothing." With applications continuing to be submitted to Mayor Hernandez and Mayor Parsons, the two politicians have agreed that it may come down to a battle of skills, wits, or both.

All students should note that it is not too late to notify either mayor of your candidacy. Anyone who wants to be considered for a Marshal position should plan on showing up to McKledin at 6:00pm and finding the Minnesota delegation (there will still be time to button trade).

Marshals will be picked in time to represent the state at the Welcome Ceremonies.

Broke History Day Students Find Unlikely Sponsor in Reflective Pool By: Sovigne Gardner

Yesterday afternoon, Grace Gardner, Sovigne Gardner, and Anna Mulhern went to the reflective pool at the mall on the University of Maryland campus. "I just wanted to go wading in the pool!" Anna said. "It was so hot! Then I saw Grace and Sovigne bending over in it, and they were getting cash!" "We needed money for our plane fare. We didn't want to stay in Washington D.C. forever!" Sovigne explained. "We saw coins in the pool, and just picked them up." Anna soon got to work helping Grace and Sovigne. "We collected a grand total of $1.49!" Grace exclaimed proudly. "Tomorrow, we're going to take our parents out for breakfast!" They stopped collecting only when a homeless man came to join the hunt.

Opening Ceremony Officially Kicks off National History Day

McKeldan Mall resembled the New York Stock Exchange Sunday night as the button trading bonanza ensued. Minnesota history students excelled at button trading, many collecting over forty states. "Fifty Nifty" was sung, although the audience was a bit less than enthusiastic. The agenda said that there were speakers but between the chaos of state pride and mass button trading it was a bit difficult to tell. There was a mad rush to find America Samoa's rare buttons but they did not arrive until just after the ceremony – leading to even more mystery! It is also rumored that Alabama's buttons will be arriving today.

The sun was nice and the clouds were setting in while we watched Nick Reed represent the state of Minnesota on the main stage. When he came back he said, "I wanted to take a selfie but I figured that would be frowned upon." So the official National History Day competition has begun, and a full week of presentations and judging is ahead!

(In the print version of the article there is an adorable picture of Meghana displaying her impressive collection of History Day buttons. However, Minnesota HD Staff and Microsoft Word are having a disagreement of epic proportions, and are unable to insert said photo and maintain the integrity of this newsletter. Apologies!

NHD Goes All "Right Click Synonym" On Us

Staff has known for years that the Bulletin is Pulitzer-worthy but we finally received the National recognition so rightfully deserved--at least from National History Day. Social media posts spouted off on Sunday afternoon, "The Minnesota delegation puts out a daily pdf newsletter of NHD happenings, rumor, innuendo, and corny jokes. Also, no shortage of A/C-related braggadocio." While staff is thrilled over this new publicity, they were unsure what braggadocio means...definitely a "right-click synonym" moment to find out that the bulletin is "arrogant or boastful." Although this term may be correct, staff believes that "awesome (town)," "fun (city)," or whimsical would be better. But still, we appreciate any acknowledgement we can get, maybe now somebody will actually read it. The staff has even taken to trying to incorporate the words into their daily vocabulary, although they may not have a complete handle of them yet as staffer Kyle was heard saying, "those are some braggadocio apples in the dining hall."

FLOSS MANIA REACHES CAMPUS

Mr. History kept his word and set up a sweat shop Saturday night in the 5th floor lounge in order to create the one and only FLOSS PINS! Students congregated together to create an assembly line of floss cartons, Minnesota stickers and plastics pins. The work was grueling but the History Day students took to button making like a hungry squirrel to a Cheet-o. Tuesday morning word began to spread that the pins were assembled and button trading was about to be taken to a whole other level. Seamus Flynn was one of the first to get ahold of the magical floss pins and exclaimed to mentor Emily, "IT'S FLOSS MANIAAAAAA!!" Fanny packs are full and Minnesota students are throwing other states for a loop in the epic button trading war. If you haven't gotten your hands on floss pins yet find Mr. History and jump of the clean teeth train. Remember, a healthy mouth is a happy mouth.

Jennie "Needs No Help" Hebaus

It was a busy day for History Day kids as registration started. Exhibit kids had to bring their boards to the Exhibit Hall for set up. Nick Reed carried his copious amounts of plastic wrap to his table. Anselma scurried around for a sharpie and got ahold of the only New Hampshire button in the competition. Emily Zoborowski and her dad worked hard to make up for Anna Weiland's late arrival. While Mara Brick and Mari Leland were busy erecting fake fire above their board. Representing Sunrise Park in White Bear Lake, Jennie Hebaus, a junior individual exhibit, was busy putting her board together--all by HERSELF! What a trooper. Weighing in at approximately 90 pounds, Jennie meticulously unwrapped her panels and began hammering and screwing only to find out that her hinge pins were missing. Instead of giving up or asking for help, Jennie trudged back to the dorms and carried a box of supplies back to the exhibit hall to continue setting her board up. Staff tried to assist but her politely told to "back up out of my space." It looks like Jennie "Needs No Help" Hebaus has got her exhibit board on lockdown. Other exhibit participants should look to her if they need an extra hand putting their title up or gluing something down.

Bowling Shirt Frenzy at NHD Registration

While Minnesota History Day staffers were helping students unload their exhibit boards they were approached by multiple History Day people from other States praising the fabulousness of their bowling shirts. One woman even took it so far as to yelling excitedly, "Eureka! I MUST trade something for one of your bowling shirts!" Jill explained, "unfortunately we are not able to trade our bowling shirts. Mooster History sews each individual shirt infusing awesomeness that is only obtainable by Minnesota History Day staffers." Although the woman was disappointed that she could not get her hands on a shirt, she walked away with a smile saying, "I understand, it does take a long time to sew with only three fingers on each hand!"

Mooster History Stitching Away!

Minnesota and Hawaii competitors spotted together--budding diplomacy or conspiracy?

Early this morning Minnesota student Kirby Goodel was spotted returning from The Diner with a member of the Hawaii History Day delegation, Alex, dressed in a mix of camouflage and History Day attire. Simon seemed hesitant to be seen with his newfound friend when four staffers stumbled upon the duo.

Seeing the cross-state companions from afar, the staffers smiled and commented on the ability of National History Day to bring students from all states together, but this positive perception soured quickly after they observed Kirby's dodgy behavior.

When the staffers stopped to talk with the two, Kirby kept his eyes averted and his arms crossed while Alex traded buttons with the staffers. The two continued on to dormitories while the staffers headed towards The Diner.

Questions are now being raised by pertinent members of the Minnesota and Hawaii delegations about the nature of this covert breakfast meeting. What originally appeared to be budding friendship and diplomacy between the two History Day ambassadors is now thought to be a developing sabotage plot. Both students were unavailable for comment, but state and national staff have been alerted to the potential danger these two unlikely companions pose.

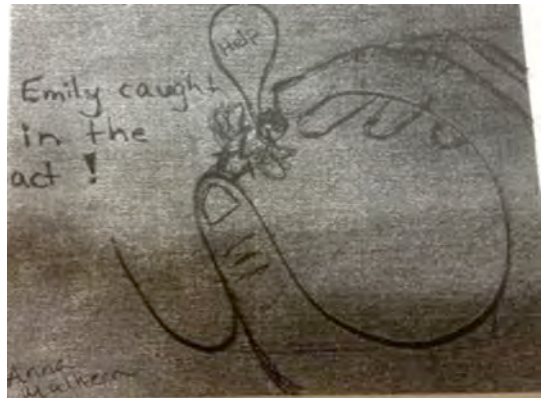

As the first day of History Day comes to a close, two young masterminds set all on edge.

Ungrateful Estonians Sing in Rain

The inevitable triumph of world Socialism is under attack by some of our misguided Baltic brothers in Estonia. Capitalist infiltrators have formed clandestine choirs in a futile attempt to rally the proletariat against the Soviet motherland. Reporters from the Daily Worker have witnessed these poorly orchestrated sing-alongs. As opposed to the beautiful melody of the Internationale, the Estonians chirp out folk songs filled with sentimental longings for an era marked by exploitation of the masses.

Proof of capitalist intervention came from the observation of one particular group of singers named "Seamus" "Kirby" and "Ethan" who spent months soliciting praise and glory in some kind of history competition. This pursuit of individual acclaim at the expense of collective solidarity clearly reveals how the Estonians have sold out the Revolution. Fortunately, their spirits were dampened by a steady downpour. It is hoped that the Estonians will abandon their musical delusions and return to the embrace of the Socialist brotherhood.

Vigilant Student Breaks Up History Day Child Labor Ring

Sarah Westad, chair of the White Bear Lake Central Committee for Child Labor Reform, infiltrated a dorm at the University of Maryland and exposed the exploitation of adolescents who were forced into the dark world of the "button trade." Westad discovered that students were routinely locked in dorm lounges where they were forced to manufacture hundreds of "Floss Pins." These innocents were lured into their forced labor by "staff" who promised them buttons from exotic U.S. territories and the state of West Virginia.

Communist Comeback

The Communist Party has successfully begun infiltrating a program called National History Day. The Central Committee of the Supreme Soviet is determined to reverse the sagging membership of the Party by recruiting youth with a passion for social justice. A prime target is a small charter school in a quiet neighborhood of St. Paul's Highland Park neighborhood. This investment in the students of Cyber Village Academy is already starting to pay off. After a strong showing at Minnesota History Day, six of our new agents progressed to the national competition in Maryland. Their presentations will touch the hearts of the masses and build socialist brotherhood through the distribution of pins to unsuspecting youth of other states. Our comrades will also have the opportunity to challenge the premises of Western Capitalism during congressional visits on Wednesday.

Juniors Get Judged!

On the first day of official judging, our junior qualifiers wowed their judges with awesome (town) projects. From action movies to Estonia to Little Rock Nine to the Dakota War, Minnesota did not fail to impress in the first round. Junior documentaries also rocked it out on Monday. With interesting topics of Silent Spring, the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory, the Dakota War, and Gandhi, Minnesota reached many different areas of history.

Although audiences are not allowed into the interviews for papers and websites, we know that our kids did fantastic in them by the looks on their faces when they came out! The GI Bill, Communism, Robert Smalls, the Stonewall Riots, Chemotherapy, and the Cuban Missile Crisis were all crowd favorites. Our papers and websites were perfectly organized and flowed so well it was almost like we were floating down a lazy river of History Day goodness (doesn't that sound nice?). Exhibit students emerging from the big, brown doors were greeted with lots of bravado by their fan clubs. The Fall of the Western Roman Empire, the Polio Vaccination, the Civilian Conservation Corps, and Dr. Harkin's were bursting with information and quotes galore.

By far, a highlight of Monday was seeing Minnesota proudly supporting their teammates from across the state. Your HD staff is SO PROUD OF YOUR ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND SUCCESS! CONGRATULATIONS!!

Seniors Go Undercover

In their last day prior to competition senior division students spent their time doing a variety of things. Some used the remaining hours to polish performances and rehearse, or do a final check on process papers and bibliographies. Others decided to let their fate rest on the roll of the dice and napped their way through the day. However, two students decided to take a more active role in determining the outcome of their day tomorrow. It came to staff attention that two students donned disguises and did some surveillance work. It appears as though Maddie Pavek and Laura Gale picked up some strategies at the Spy Museum and have been using those tactics to great effect. They were able to blend in with students from other states to reconnoiter the competition and draft their plans accordingly. “We just wanted to make sure that we used every edge available to us,” said Laura, “It is amazing how many tips and tricks Maddie and I learned at the museum, you’ll never see us coming.” Good luck tomorrow, ladies. We won’t even know what hit us.

No Cure for Dance Fever

The NHD student dance was held in the Armory this year and most students took advantage of the opportunity to bust a move. Despite the rainy weather, Sarah Wheaton was seen using her shopping cart to take some items across the entire dance floor, even gaining recognition from Kansas. Sammi Jo capitalized on the weather by using her newly acquired poncho to rally the dance floor into a massive showing of the famous Minnesota banana dance. Mr. History was proud to see Minnesota students carrying on the legacy of this prolific dance and staff had to restrain him from joining in on the fun.

Jealousy, Betrayal, and Greed on the Button Trading Market

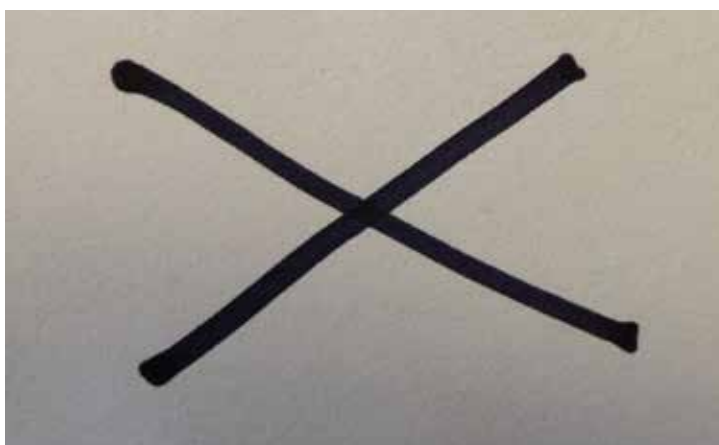

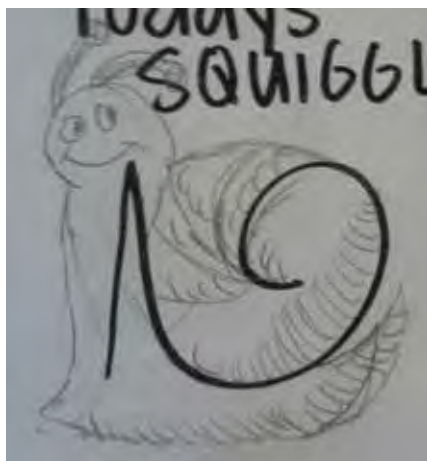

By: Seamus Flynn and Noah Rooze

Sunday was a big day for button trading, and the registration unexpectedly unleashed a scourge of Bourgeois Button Bamboozles upon the History Day world! Comrade Noah Rooze, previously believed to be Nikita Krushev's son, revealed his true roots in order to call his parents and temporarily exchanged dental floss for fellow History Day go-er, Seamus Flynn's, cell phone. "We were so disappointed," said the buttons in Flynn's fanny pack, "to imagine that Rooze, the button bamboozler, would accept a worthless electronic item over us state treasures! The very thought of it is appalling!"

Meanwhile, Seamus fought a terrible emotional battle in his dark and musty dorm room. He said, "For the rest of the morning Noah vanished. My phone has left me for him! I had told it I was about to make a call, to spare it from the terrible ordeal of lying about in my pack, being jostled and pierced by buttons, but, well, it simply wouldn't believe me." Upon his accusation of this heinous crime, Rooze stammered a moment, "I...like phones. What can I say?"

In a second interview, he offered a counter-argument, suggesting, for those who wished to believe him, that it was all wrong. "I took great care of all my buttons," he said dreamily whilst holding his collections in his hands, "especially, this beautiful cupcake." The phone refused to comment. If you would like to join the Bourgeois Button Bamboozlers Society (BBBS), please contact Comrades Seamus and Noah. By the way, Noah can spot commies from a mile away, but, he will not make an attempt to sing at them.

Sun Shines on Senior Judging

On Tuesday, the Minnesota delegation splashed their way through the "Great Deluge" of NHD 2013. Whether you were on campus or in DC, the showers gave our tourists, junior presenters, and staff a thorough soaking. Our soggy seniors went to bed with dreams of wowing their judges -- and drying their shoes. It was a wondrous sight when they rose up off of their plastic mattresses to the bright sunshine of a new day. Minnesota seniors also shined proudly today all over the University of Maryland occupying the farthest stretches of campus. Our documentarians captivated judges with stories of highways, Title IX, and Maddie Pavek turned a technical difficulty into a charming example of how to get the judges on your side. The Mankato ladies, Nick Reed, and Kaitlynn Lindaman all rocked the exhibit hall. The Mankato boys stayed calm by imitating famous animals in history while Nick and Allegra kept it casual in their attire and demeanor. Maggie, Carly, and Kateri performed from the infirmary to a team of nurses. Ida Tarbell debated more than just Rockefeller when she took on a history professor who moonlights as a sourceologist. Eugene Francois Vidocq and the 1970s Oil Crisis were crowd favorites. Laura Gale was asked the most difficult question of the day when her teacher asked her whether she preferred a celebratory meal at Taco Bell or McDonalds. Caledonia avoided a near chair-tastrophe as the senior performers illuminated audiences with characters ranging from Gerald Gault to Lech Walesa. Jessica Reinhart wins the Minnesota's most prepared award by showing up early and being ready when her judges started ahead of schedule. After presenting in the dungeon of Francis Scott Key, Mazzy and Katie felt some parts of campus would be better left unseen. Congratulations to all of our seniors and thank you to all of the Minnesotans who put on their sunscreen and embraced the radiance of a magical Tuesday.

Mr. History's Dorm Diet Revealed

Inquisitive students have discovered one of the most closely guarded secrets of Minnesota History Day. Until Ruhi Doshi and Mara Brick penetrated Mr. History's secret lair, the mystery of how the bowling-shirted leader managed to stay alive even though he never eats in the diner. "He seems to be up all the time," Mara explained, "but how can he keep up that pace if he doesn't start his day with donuts and cereal like we do?" Junior Detective, Ruhi Doshi, volunteered to help Mara get to the bottom of this. "Mr. History carelessly left his door key in the staff lounge, so we knew that we could break into his lair and figure out his secret." It seems Mr. History has been surviving on an endless supply of diet coke and cheeseballs. He has found the delicate balance between calorie free caffeine and processed powdered cheese. "I stumbled upon this diet back when I was just a second year coordinator," Mr. H remembered fondly. "A few years ago I tried to mix it up by swapping in whole milk and snack size snickers, but it was too hot, so the chocolate melted and the milk curdled. Lesson learned." Other history day staffers are beginning to adopt the diet but caution students to mix in the occasional glass of water.

Sarah B. Finds her Sassy Pants in Elevator Lobby

When you think about History Day veteran Sarah Becker, you imagine a sweet girl, full of hope and innocence. However during an afternoon game of B.S., Sarah got Sassy. After confidently laying down her two 6's, Kyle slaps the ground and thunders dramatically, "B.S". The rest of the players must recover from there shock. The hall way is filled with silence, no one has ever dared to question Sarah Becker. With a tremendous burst of sass, Sarah replies "You can TAKE it." Monica Nelson, her group member and fellow veteran, attempts to mimic her sassy style, adding in some shoulder movement. But we all know... No one gets sassy like Sarah Becker. She was heard singing "I'm bringing sassy back" as she left the room.

Through the Grapevine

Anna Mulhern has officially embraced the name change forced upon her by the Bulletin.

*"Why are you..."
Megan Brownell*

*"I'm having a fashion emergency here."
Nick Reed*

*"Judge: What are you going to do now?
Sarah W: Go get Ice Cream."*

"We're watching Planet of the Apes. Go apes." Mary Traxler

"Never ride on the top level of a double-decker tour bus during a rainstorm," Mara Brick

Laura Gale is too sweet for the game B.S.

This isn't Cute Fair. This is History Day.

Taking the metro to these visits is easiest, just make sure you get off at the CAPITOL SOUTH METRO STOP. Also remember to thank these representatives for their time, they are very busy folks. You can meet in the Capitol Visitor's Gallery and reference your legislator for the passes, or a member of their staff will be there to meet you. Office meetings will take place where they are listed below. Don't forget to sport the thumbs up and be proud of your projects!

FASHION EMERGENCY CALLS FOR DRASTIC MEASURES

After needing Maddie Pavek's help with ironing, Nick Reed found himself having another fashion crisis moments before judging. "Sammi! My pants are too large and I have no belt! What do I do?!" Nick was worried about losing his bottoms during judging so Sammi Jo was quick to think and came up with a flowery solution. She dug through her suitcase and pulled out a black and flower designed belt. Nick shouted with joy, "This is the cutest belt I've ever seen!" and quickly adorned the accessory. The problem of the baggy pants was solved and Nick went to judging with the coolest belt in town. It probably gave him good luck, too.

FCAT RAIN DELAY IS OVER!

PULL! PULL! PULL!

With the end of the rain, Mayors Kyle and Rachel have officially suspended their efforts to tax the Minnesota delegation for the construction of a domed FCAT stadium. The mayors have also been able to welcome the final members of each community who found their way to College Park on Sunday. With both teams from Fun City and Awesome Town back to full strength, it was time for the games to begin again. In two close games, Fun City proved to be victorious! For the third year in a row, the Kleenex Pull was an exciting start. Kyle and Rachel lost their voices shouting “1,2,3! 1,2,3!” until all of the kleenex had been removed from the box. Bailey Hilgren proved to be an old pro and pulled her three klenex with ease. Maggie Schmidt, another vet, showed Awesome Town how it’s done. Next, the games moved inside for “Goldfishing” which required students to use a straw to pick up a goldfish cracker and dump it into a bucket. In another close race, Fun City won by a close margin of 67 to 73. Every citizen of Awesome Town and Fun City is demonstrating the finest standards of sportsmanship and community spirit. Exciting challenges remain and the points are racking up!

MN HD Youth Shine in State Shenanigans

Although the spotlight for this week has been on our junior and senior entries, staff has found the need to create a youth division. This structural change was made necessary by the enthusiastic participation of Josh Nguyen and Sophie Stordahl in all aspects of the Minnesota experience at NHD. Sophie uses her compact size to great advantage as she darts in and out of button trading mobs. A wily veteran of multiple trips to NHD, Josh is in line to be the first person to rise to the level of state coordinator before graduating from high school. Both Sophie and Josh have proven skills in banana dancing and FCAT games. We are very lucky to have them in our bunch!

Senior Finals a Hit: Standing Room Only!

Moving as a swift history-loving herd, the Minnesota delegation endeavored to see all six final round presentations on Wednesday morning. Congratulations to all our senior performance and documentary final rounds - and an even bigger THANK YOU to all the students who raced through Stamp Student Union to support the state.

Anselma Abandons History Day to Accept Position at Smithsonian

Minnesota made a big splash at the National Museum of American history when Anselma Lopez became the first History Day student to accept a curatorial position on the Smithsonian staff. The museum professionals were impressed with her carefully coordinated content and her stellar skills with adhesives. What finally triggered the job offer was her amazing exhibit crate. Museum Director, John Gray commented that, "Anyone who cares enough about history to pack in such a magnificent box must be trusted with the nation's treasures." Leo Lopez was initially reluctant to leave his daughter in DC, but relented when he reviewed the details of the offer. "She has always done museum quality work, and I think she gets full benefits." Good luck Anselma!

Flash Mob in Air and Space Museum

By: Audrey Dombro

It was Sunday, just another normal day in the Air and Space Museum, or at least it seemed so. People were busy, each enveloped in their own personal lives. But this all changed when one Minnesota history student yelled “BANNAS BUNCH!” and a silence came over the museum. A startled crowd of museum-goers looked up in awe at the Minnesotans racing from every direction. Jaws gaping, the tourists stared as the Minnesota history students gathered in a massive circle and began what will go down in history as the Banana Dance Flash Mob. As the bananas bunched, got ready, got rid of thumbs, arms, and lips, united, and split, people were amazed. “It was such an appealing dance,” says Tim, laughing. The skill and precision of the banana dancers was phenomenal. Shouts of “I wish I was as cool as them” and “I totally need to learn that dance” were heard from the lips of many onlookers. “The precision of the clapping was impeccable. I’ve never seen such a wonderful banana dance in all my years of experience,” says Grace. As the flash mob came to an end, tourists watching bursted into tears, followed by a round of applause and enthusiastic cheering. It was an emotional scene. The onlookers even requested an encore, and the dancers gladly compiled. “I am speechless at the precision and fluidity of the movements,” said Sienna. The dance was even better the second time. “It just felt so good to brighten the days of so many normal people,” said performers Mazzy and Katie in unison. Students are encouraged to spread the banana dance flash mob revolution in museums everywhere. This is a chance to make history. After all, YOLO.

Through the Grapevine

“Are you me from the future?”

“I think we are going to have to put this conversation to rest.” [In a Southern accent, of course]

“What are you looking for - the bowling alley?”

“We’ve got too many seniors in the finals. We can’t get to them all. First world problem. Nope. Minnesota problem.”

Sammi Jokes

A bus load of tourists arrived at Runnymede (in England). They gathered around their guide, who explained, “This is the spot where the Barons forced King John to sign the Magna Carta.” A fellow at the front of the group asked, “When did that happen?” The guide answered, “1215.” The tourist looked at his watch and said, “Gee, hey everybody—we just missed it by a half hour!”

Expert Tips: Jill’s Picture-Taking How To

Selfie: This picture is easiest to take on an iPhone because of the front facing camera. Make sure that you are the only one in the picture (hence the name ‘selfie.’) Smile! You’re fabulous.

Photo Bomb: This type of picture is harder to obtain and requires some strategy. First, you need to find someone else taking a photo of their own. Without them noticing, try to jump into either the foreground or background of their photo. Make sure to make a goofy face. Thier photo was probably going to be boring without you!

Jumping Photo: This photo can be taken individually or in a group of up to 5 people. More than that requires a permit from the safety committee. Be sure to remove all phones, iPods, and History Day buttons out of your pockets as to avoid breaking anything and button stab wounds. A lot of the work falls onto the photographer, as they have to make sure their timing is on point. A “3-2-1” countdown before jumping is encouraged to ensure the jump is synchronized.

MINNESOTA ROCKS IT AT THE AWARDS CEREMONY

Minnesota had a full turnout for the awards ceremony this year, gaining even more popularity by the banana dances that rocked the middle of the gymnasium floor during the parade of states. Signs were held up, chanting was done, and the gophers were ready for action! Students sat white-knuckled in their seats as results began to be read, some more visibly nervous than others. Billy Menor could be seen ferociously eating goldfish crackers, a clear sign of extreme stress, before his group's results were read. Starting off Minnesota's "bronze binge" was Grace Kellar-Long's 3rd place win for her junior individual performance. Later, Minnesota completely lost it when the senior group performance results were announced. The rare and elusive "double Minny" was achieved with a 1st and 2nd place in the same category and age division. A Minnesota chant and "double Minny" whisper were completely justified and utilized to celebrate Minnesota's dominance in that category. Although long, the awards ceremony went very well and every student should be proud of their accomplishments this week. The History Day staff could not be any more proud of every single Minnesota student's hard work and positive attitudes throughout the week. A special shout out to parents and teachers, all of whom have been so helpful and also have had positive attitudes this week. The staff thank you for your hard work and dedication to Minnesota History Day!

Surprise! Eleanor and Miranda found out they made it to the final round - 8th place! - while they were reviewing their comment sheets. Way to go!
